Commissioner Adelstein:

It should not take a rocket scientist to look at society and realize that something is drastically wrong. Where do you think kids are getting the ideas for insane violence? They are getting the ideas from t.v. of course!! I am a grandmother who even has to turn the channel whenever I see the terrible violence that is so prevalent on almost every major channel. It sickens me when I have to censor even the cartoons my grandchildren are exposed to. Whatever happened to the funny cartoons? Our society is paying an exorbitant price for the smut coming across the t.v. screens in America. Please, please put a guard on this garbage for the sake of our children and society in general.

Sincerely,

Mr and Mrs Michael Riggle

I am very disappointed in the content of television programming. I am in my mid 30's, and while I had thought that some programs were violent in the 80's and 90's, they 'pale' in comparison to the violent and graphic nature of television today. We screen what our children watch, and their our very few television programs that we or our children watch.

Please reconsider the television programs that are aired, and consider the future of the next generation by not showing these programs. The only time that I watch one of the major tv networks such as NBC, ABC, or CBS, is for the news for updates.

Thank you for your careful consideration in this matter.

I just wanted to give my opinion on violence on TV.

What is the point! The things that you see are forever etched on your mind. I don't want my children watching violence (and sexual content too for that matter) because they won't forget it and that is what they will think about. I don't feel like it is healthy for anyone much less our children. Some children also act out what they see. One of my children was that way as a child. And if there are already problems you are just asking for more by setting them in front of it.

It would be great if you could make the rules more family friendly and tougher. Thanks!

I am really tired of the violence being depicted on shows flashing across the television. We are not only numbing our children to the effects of violence, we are numbing our adults, as well.

It's past time to get back to offering family oriented shows, that offer wholesome value oriented programming. I'm having to resort to watching Andy Griffith, Leave it to Beaver, and I Love Lucy reruns, to find something decent. After a diet of these shows, a glimpse of the current day prime time television shows are deplorable, and sickening in their blatant disrespect for wholesome moral values.

We have enough violence going on in our world - we don't have to bombard our citizens with it via television shows; or under rated movies, for that matter. (PG-13, when they should be R).

Thanks you for any efforts you make in cleaning up our air waves.

Dear Commissioner,

Please accept this e-mail as an expression of my desire for you to protect the children of America. TV programming has gotten way out of hand, in that, the violence, foul language and sexual content is way beyond tolerable to adults, let alone acceptable for our children to view. Our children are being damaged in ways we can only imagine by the programs they are seeing during the "family hour" of TV programming. It is to the point that we have to either turn off the TV when our young ones are up or plug in a children's video or DVD for them to watch. We cannot trust the hearts and minds of our children to those who care so very little for their welfare. Including a governing body who has taken little or no stand in enforcing the laws of decency that are in place to protect our families viewing and keep TV decent to watch and entertaining at the same time. Thank you for allowing me to tell you my concerns and voice my opinion.
